Community Gardens Awards

October 15, 2016

Established in 1974, this award is our way of promoting island wide interest in the joy of the art as well as environmentally sound gardening practices including the preservation of native plants and wildlife. The limited criteria for selection for the Award is that the garden belongs to a non-member and at least 80% of the maintenance of that garden be done by the owner.

This year we recognize:

Jonathan Morse

Jonathan has been developing the gardens of his family home since 1998. Using both industrial and natural materials, organic and geometric forms, he has created a garden of true inspiration.

Rose Edgecombe & Kevin Grayum

A wedding ~ the ultimate garden update motivator! The result ~ a private oasis, cool and lush, warm and inviting with interesting design elements. A creation bursting with color and love.

Denise St. Dennis

Inheriting a well established garden, Denise appreciates the knowledge of those who planted before her using great color combinations and year round interest. After two summers she has enlarged the gardens, adding her own special touch.

Villa Vashon

Bonnie McCallister and Dean Haugen's Asian inspired gardens and romantic waterfront suite create beauty and magic for life's special moments. The Villa has a unique combination of old world charm and urban chic. Garden designer: Doug Rice.
